Product information

Pure Nature Christmas trees are grown in accordance with the strict Danish ecological regulations. On average, there are 30% more wild animals and plants in organically operated fields compared to non-organic fields.

The CO₂ account for Pure Nature's Christmas tree production is, at the very least, neutral. This is because we plant the same number of trees as we cut down. If a Christmas tree is incinerated in a heating plant after it has been used, it saves on oil and gas and the CO₂ account for that particular tree will subsequently be positive.
